TONIGHT'S PLAY

Author: Barre Lyndon

Director: Ben Small

Dr. Clitterhouse, a learned and dignified physician, becomes interested in the study of criminology and decides to find out from actual experience just how the nerves of criminals respond to their misdeeds. Thus, entirely in the interest of science, he becomes a famous bandit; first, alone, then at the head of a gang. Eventually he gets enough material for his book, and that is where his difficulties come in. For, on the outskirts of the gang and jealous of its success, is the wicked fence, Benny Kellerman, who tries to outwit the fine gentleman, but the good manners of the doctor triumph. Although there is a little matter of murder to explain, it is fairly safe to say that it will come out all right. For Dr. Clitterhouse may be a crook, but he is first a gentleman.

CAST PROFILE

By Dorothy D. Kahler

● Two who claim they've never looked a footlight in the eye until now are BEN KERNAN (Sgt. Bates) and WILLIAM BRYANT (Pal Green), both from McChord, both pilots of the familiar "box-car", and both refugees from a poker table. ● EUGENE FYKE (alternate Sgt. Bates) managed theaters in Portland and Seattle in the early days of vaudeville and has been working backstage on lights this season. ● An interest in the study of people brought ANTHONY JELLEN (Badger) into the theater at tryout time. When not a-burgling on our stage he's a life insurance and real estate salesman. ● JAYNE RICHARDSON (Nurse Ann) received her early schooling in Tacoma, then attended Louisiana State University, where she majored in drama. The theater, a full-time job, and her husband's ministerial career, comprise her major interests. ● BOB SCHMID (Dr. Clitterhouse) doesn't care how he spends his evenings just so he's in a theater. You'll probably remember him from "Kiss and Tell" and "The Male Animal". ● Speaking with a cockney accent is just beer and skittles (anybody know what a skittle is?) to LEONARD SMITH (Tug), born a Britisher, and, for the duration of the show, a commuter from Puyallup. ● TOM VITOS (Benny Kellerman) is welcomed to our ranks with no taint of the theater clouding his past. ● With a finger in more pies than anyone in the theater, ED ARTHUR (Sir William Grant) still manages to take part in a play or so every season and to do his stint backstage. ● DON LUCAS (Oakie) always arrives early so he can start the fires, touch up the set, tinker with lighting, assist with the makeup, and catch his own cue. ● The gal who has audiences eating out of her hand, DAISY BRYANT (Daisy), regularly lapses into a deep indigo mood over fancied imperfections in her performance.
